The song of the youth-beared yellow hind,.
The jar of life, and the traveller's word,.
And the chost of children's play.

He cets by the green high rend all day,
That beggar blind and old,
The locks on his brow are thin and grey,
And he light are him and cold;
Yet he mormareth never, day or night,
But seeing the world by his igner sight,
He patiently waits with his heart all light,
